Carver-Price Wins 7-6

Homecoming at Carver-Price was a success this week end as the Cavaliers won the end of a 7-6 score. The first two warriors ended with the score 6-0 in favor of the visitor as the result of a 5 yard scoring play from the visitors quarter-back to end David Ross. The third quarter ended with no scoring with Carver-Price failing to enter the two scoring opportunities inside the Amherst twenty (20) yard line.

In the fourth quarter, the Cavaliers started to roll and put together a 65 yard scoring drive that ended with the deciding score. The scoring drive featured the passing of Walter Turner to Robert Trent and the running of Edward Lockett. During the drive, Trent caught three passes good for 25 yards and Lockett made the longest run of the day for the home team with a 35 yard romper around right end, that ended near the Amherst goal line. After a penalty, quarter-back Turner climaxed the drive by sneaking across the goal from the one foot line. Lockett made the final key run of the afternoon when he ran around right end for the final score of the game in what proved to be the winning point for the day.

The defense played an outstanding part in the low scoring contest as Kenneth Fitch, Jesse Lewis, George Fleshman, Wayne Franklin, and Robert Trent were outstanding all the afternoon with Trent coming up with three key interceptions.

Carver-Price now has a 1-1 conference record and a 1-3 record against all opponents.

What Is Life?

by Sandra Mitchell

The weary days are passing by
And life is moving on.
We're born, we live and then we die.
We laugh and weep and mourn.
Sometimes we wonder as we live.
What life is all About?
Is it just living until we die?
Of this I have my doubts.
A good life is full of everything.
God, friends, good fun and smiles:
Hard work and satisfaction.
Of knowing it's worthwile.
It's full of faith and worshipping.
The God who made us all.
Of trying to do the best we can.
To be ready for His call.
Yes, life is great and as we go.
Along it's enlightening way.
Just make it count for something.
Don't let it waste away.
Live fully, faithfully and worship God.
Love all your friends the same.
Work hard, enjoy your fun as well.
Then life won't have been in vain.

For My Neighbor

Lesson for October 20, 1963

As a Christian, I have acknowledged my responsibility in two directions I am responsible TO God and FOR my neighbor. No matter how high in the scale of human society a man may live, he never can climb so high that he is no longer answerable to God. No matter how high a wall a man builds around himself, though he may shut himself away from mankind, even from the needy part of mankind, every man is still responsible to God for his neighbor. This is true of all men whether they know it and believe it and live by it, or not. The Christian is not the only man who has this double responsibility, but he is the only man who is clearly aware of this. If he is not aware of it or denies it, we have a right to ask, Is he actually Christian?

Three Illustrations

Three illustrations will show how this works out in practice. Take first the problem of liquor. Many a man is able to drink in moderation all his life. Such a man may say to himself: "Drinking or not-drinking is a personal problem. Every man must solve it or answer it in his best judgment. Other people best Jugment. Other people have no business caring whether I drink or not, and it's not my business to inquire whether other people can drink and hold their liquor like gentlemen. Every tub must stand on its own bottom."

But this man, just because he himself can "hold his liquor like a gentleman," can be one of the worst influences in his community. You will hear such a man denouncing juvenile delinquency, unaware that he is contributing to the very delinquency of which he complains. For others, seeing how little he is hurt by his temperate drinking, will be encouraged to drink also, only to find, when it is too late, that they haven't the smae powers of restraint.

Attitudes

Another illustration: Some people are so constructed mentally that they can take, or seem to take, some wrong attitude more or less in fun, without really meaning it. They speak of sacred things in a tone of light mockery, or they make all sorts of jokes, some pretty sorry ones, about marriage or women, or the church. They will say with a laugh, "I'd like to wring his neck" or refer to some absent person as "that dirty buzzard." Now such a person may be one who really doesn't mean any harm by this, and takes no harm himself. It's just a "manner of speaking." He doesn't seem to be affected by the silly or vulgar words that pass his lips. Essentially he remains an honest and honorable man. (This doesn't happen often, but it does happen.) Now here is a parallel to your moderate drinker. This careless talker spreads the dirt or the froth in moderation. He's really sober for all his careless speech. But perhaps just because he is an attractive personality, he (maybe without intending it) induces others to imitate him. And most of these imitators find out, too late, that "he toucheth pitch shee must be defiled." Using vulgar language leaves the user vulgar; use of the language of hate and contempt helps to shape the soul of the man who even plays at hatred and contempt. "It doesn't hurt me." The first man says. But it hurts others who try it, just to be smart. The first man does harm to others, just because he doesn't think about others. He feels responsible for himself alone, whereas he is actually responsible for all whom he influences.

Justice

Take a third example. Some people are so constructed that a pressing hard on some of your neighbors. Not neighbors you like. Maybe they are "impossible poor," for example. It may be a bad condition in the public schools; or it may be the denial of an education to those who are bright but poor; or it may be the recreation facilities for young people; it may be an unfair differential in wages because of sex or race. Whatever the injustice may be, if it doesn't hurt me I'm not likely to worry much about it. But this carelessness about injustice from which we benefit is exactly the opposite of the Christian position. The Christian position always should be: "What is this doing to my brother, my neighbor"

(Based on outlines copyrighted by the Division of Christian Education, National Council of the Churches of Christ in the U.S.A. Released by Community Press Service.)

Finger Prints Of Character

We heard much about fingerprinting during the war. In fact it came to its fuller use at that time. It is necessary in today's world; for it is used to identify and convict criminals. It is also used to identify people in cases of accidents or amnesia.

The infallibility of finger-printing lies in the fact that there are no two prints alike. In all the history of this system no two have been found exactly alike. This is amazing but wonderful. This is a confirmation of what the Bible has always taught. We become a "living soul", a person, an individual when we arrive in this world. (Genesis 2:7) We are identified by the individuality of our finger ture.

It is true that there are some basic likes in each person, but the differences are magnified more than the likeness. We live in an extremely personal world. The finger- prints of our character reveal the kind of a person we really are. The Apostle Paul says of the Christian that we are "His Workmanship". The results of God's creative activity in Christ. We are "God's Poems," the results of his creative work. (Eph. 2:10)

In this light we are important to God. This finger - print of importance is stamped upon us. Over against material value one person is worth more that the whole world. What if one gains the whole world and loses his soul. What shall a man give in exchange for his soul? The finger-print of God is upon each life which makes him important to Christ. So important that he emptied himself — divested himself of an equality with God, and took upon himself the form of a slave and was made in the likeness of man. He gave himself that man might be saved as an individual. This makes man terribly important to God.

Then the fingerprint of eternity is in every life. Man is more than the combination of the biochemical world. He is stamped with the likeness of God. Therefore, he has future as well as present as a part of his personality. God has so stamped him. He cannot make choices or decisions without the conscious or sub-conscious influence of this eternal quality in his life. As he will to avoid it, man exists in relationship to eternity.

The total results of these "prints" of a person make up his character. A Christian's life begins when he comes to Christ. One of the major functions of the Church and the continuous publishing of the Gospel is that every man might be persuaded to come to Christ. In so doing he takes on the print of God's redeeming grace, and his nature and character will have in every grove and crevice, the nature of Christ upon it.

This is enough to challenge every person, with a sense of his value, to belong to, support, and be active in the church of his choice in his community. No other "community" is dedicated to helping man find God's plan for his life as the "Religious Community". This should challenge our best.
